UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

CANDIE WHITE, individually and on behalf of all others similarly situated,

Plaintiff,

v.

FIRST STEP GROUP LLC, DOES 1–10, and each of them,¹

Defendants.

No. 2:16-cv-02439-KJM-GGH

ORDER

This putative class action involves a debt collection agency’s attempts to over-collect on time-barred debts. Named plaintiff Candie White claims defendant First Step Group LLC (“First Step”) violated federal and state law when it attempted to collect an unenforceable

¹ The Ninth Circuit provides “[plaintiffs] should be given an opportunity through discovery to identify [] unknown defendants” “in circumstances . . . ‘where the identity of the alleged defendant[] [is] not [] known prior to the filing of a complaint.’” Wakefield v. Thompson, 177 F.3d 1160, 1163 (9th Cir. 1999) (quoting Gillespie v. Civiletti, 629 F.2d 637, 642 (9th Cir. 1980)) (modifications in original). Plaintiff is cautioned that such defendants will be dismissed where “it is clear that discovery would not uncover the identities, or that the complaint would be dismissed on other grounds.” Id. (quoting Gillespie, 629 F.2d at 642). Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 4(m), as recently amended, provides for dismissal of defendants not served within 90 days of filing of the complaint unless plaintiff shows good cause. See Glass v. Fields, No. 1:09-cv-00098-OWW-SMS PC, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 97604 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 31, 2011); Hard Drive Prods. v. Does, No. C 11-01567 LB, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 109837, at *2-4 (N.D. Cal. 3 motion. Opp'n, ECF No. 11. First Step filed a reply. Reply, ECF No. 12. The court submitted

5 motion.

6 I. BACKGROUND

7 A. First Step's Debt Collection Letter

8 On or about May 26, 2016, First Step sent White a debt collection letter in an 9 effort to collect a debt she allegedly owed to Cach, LLC, in the amount of $17,779.31.
10 FAC ¶¶ 11–12. In the letter, First Step offered White three “payment options” that White could 11 accept as “settlement” for the alleged debt. Id. ¶¶ 13–14.

12 More specifically, the letter stated, “[y]our account has been placed with our office 13 for collection. We have been authorized to settle your outstanding obligation for substantially 14 less than the current balance owed, or set up a payment arrangement that best fits your situation.” 15 See id. Ex. A (Collection Letter), ECF No. 7. The letter explained, “[w]e are not obligated to 16 renew these offers,” and then presented three “options” for repayment. Id. Depending on when 17 payment is made, the options are for a 65 percent reduction of the current balance, a 50 percent 18 reduction, or for payment in full. Id. Below these options, the letter states:

19 THE LAW LIMITS HOW LONG YOU CAN BE SUED ON A 20 DEBT. BECAUSE OF THE AGE OF YOUR DEBT, CACH, 21 LLC, WILL NOT SUE YOU FOR IT, AND CACH, LLC, WILL 22 NOT REPORT IT TO ANY CREDIT REPORTING AGENCY.
23 WE ARE NOT A LAW FIRM AND WE CANNOT GIVE YOU
24 LEGAL ADVICE. SHOULD YOU CHOOSE TO ACCEPT ONE 25 OF THESE SETTLEMENTS, YOU MAY WISH TO CONSULT 26 WITH AN ATTORNEY ABOUT THE CONSEQUENCES OF 27 THE SETTLEMENT, IF ANY.

24 FAC ¶ 14; id. Ex. A (Collection Letter).

25 White alleges the letter excluded several pieces of critical information. The letter 26 failed to disclose the age of the debt, that there is a four year statute of limitations that applies to 27 the debt, and that the debt was time-barred under the applicable statute of limitations. FAC ¶ 15.
28 The letter also failed to explain that making any payment on the time-barred debt would revive

1 the statute of limitations and permit a suit against White to recover the debt in full. Id. White
2 was confused and misled by First Step’s use of the word “settlement” and believed that the letter
3 threatened legal action in connection with First Step’s effort to collect the alleged debt. Id. ¶ 16.

4 B. White’s Debt

5 Cach, LLC, was not the original owner of White’s debt. Providian Bank made an 6 initial loan to White in 2003. Id. ¶ 24. In 2006, Washington Mutual purchased Providian Bank
7 and, along with it, White’s debt. Id. ¶ 26. In 2008, Washington Mutual went bankrupt, and JP
8 Morgan Chase purchased all of Washington Mutual’s assets, including White’s debt. Id. ¶ 28. JP 9 Morgan Chase subsequently sold the debt to Cach, LLC, who then retained First Step for the 10 purposes of collecting on the debt. Id. ¶¶ 29–30.

11 The amount of White’s alleged debt has increased significantly since 2003. The 12 amount of the original loan by Providian Bank was for $5,000. Id. ¶ 24. The original loan 13 agreement did not expressly provide for annual interest greater than 10 percent. Id. ¶ 25. White 14 made timely payments until 2006, after which Washington Mutual began to charge penalties and 15 interest that were never part of the original loan agreement. Id. ¶ 27. According to Washington 16 Mutual, White’s debt was approximately $8,000. Id. At no point did White agree to interest and 17 fees that could increase the debt from the original loan amount of $5,000 to $17,779.31. Id. ¶ 31.
18 White believes First Step knew or ignored the clear possibility that the amount First Step sought 19 to collect reflected an illegal rate of interest. Id. ¶ 32.

20 C. White’s Claims

21 White alleges it was First Step’s common practice to send out form debt collection 22 letters to consumers nationwide in its attempts to collect time-barred debts and to collect illegal 23 fees and costs in excess of the maximum amount permitted under the law. Id. ¶ 35. White brings 24 three claims on behalf of a putative class: (1) violations of the federal Fair Debt Collection 25 Practices Act (FDCPA), 15 U.S.C. § 1692 et seq., for First Step’s use of deceptive language and 26 material omissions in its debt collection letters; (2) violations of FDCPA for First Step’s 27 attempted collection of amounts in gross excess of those permissible by law or the loan 28 agreement; and (3) violations of the California Rosenthal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act

1 (RFDCPA), Cal. Civ. Code § 1788 et seq. Id. ¶¶ 51–65. The third claim under RFDCPA is 2 wholly derivative of the first two claims under FDCPA. Id. ¶ 65 (“Each of the above named 3 violations of the FDCPA is also a violation of the RFDCPA.”).

4 D. First Step’s Motion

5 First Step moves to dismiss the first amended complaint in its entirety under 6 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim. See generally Mot. First 7 Step argues the debt collection letter adequately discloses the nature of the time-barred debt and 8 that the amount First Step sought to collect was merely the amount Cach, LLC, reported it was 9 owed. Mem. P. & A. 2, ECF No. 9-1. Below, after laying out the standard applicable to First 10 Step’s motion, the court proceeds to consider the relevant provisions of FDCPA and RFDCPA.

11 II. LEGAL STANDARD

12 Under Rule 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, a party may move to 13 dismiss a complaint for “failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted.” A court may 14 dismiss “based on the lack of cognizable legal theory or the absence of sufficient facts alleged 15 under a cognizable legal theory.” Balistreri v. Pacifica Police Dep’t, 901 F.2d 696, 699 (9th Cir.
16 1990).

17 Although a complaint need contain only “a short and plain statement of the claim 18 showing that the pleader is entitled to relief,” Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2), in order to survive a motion 19 to dismiss this short and plain statement “must contain sufficient factual matter . . . to ‘state a 20 claim to relief that is plausible on its face.’” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009) (quoting 21 Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570 (2007)). A complaint must include something 22 more than “an unadorned, the-defendant-unlawfully-harmed-me accusation” or “‘labels and 23 conclusions’ or ‘a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action.’” Id. (quoting 24 Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555). Determining whether a complaint will survive a motion to dismiss 25 for failure to state a claim is a “context-specific task that requires the reviewing court to draw on 26 its judicial experience and common sense.” Id. at 679. Ultimately, the inquiry focuses on the 27 interplay between the factual allegations of the complaint and the dispositive issues of law in the 28 action. See Hishon v. King & Spalding, 467 U.S. 69, 73 (1984).

1 In making this context-specific evaluation, this court must construe the complaint 2 in the light most favorable to the plaintiff and accept as true the factual allegations of the 3 complaint. Erickson v. Pardus, 551 U.S. 89, 93–94 (2007). This rule does not apply to “a legal 4 conclusion couched as a factual allegation,” Papasan v. Allain, 478 U.S. 265, 286 (1986) quoted 5 in Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555, nor to “allegations that contradict matters properly subject to 6 judicial notice” or to material attached to or incorporated by reference into the complaint.
7 Sprewell v. Golden State Warriors, 266 F.3d 979, 988–89 (9th Cir. 2001). A court’s 8 consideration of documents attached to a complaint or incorporated by reference or matter of 9 judicial notice will not convert a motion to dismiss into a motion for summary judgment. United 10 States v. Ritchie, 342 F.3d 903, 907–08 (9th Cir. 2003); Parks Sch. of Bus. v. Symington, 51 F.3d
11 1480, 1484 (9th Cir. 1995); compare Van Buskirk v. Cable News Network, Inc., 284 F.3d 977, 12 980 (9th Cir. 2002) (noting that even though court may look beyond pleadings on motion to 13 dismiss, generally court is limited to face of the complaint on 12(b)(6) motion).

14 III. THE FEDERAL FAIR DEBT COLLECTION PRACTICES ACT (FDCPA)

15 The federal FDCPA was enacted in 1977 as a broad remedial statute designed to 16 “eliminate abusive debt collection practices by debt collectors, to insure that those debt collectors 17 who refrain from using abusive debt collection practices are not competitively disadvantaged, and 18 to promote consistent State action to protect consumers against debt collection abuses.” Gonzales 19 v. Arrow Fin. Services, LLC, 660 F.3d 1055, 1060–61 (9th Cir. 2011) (quoting 15 U.S.C. § 20 1692(e)). The Act comprehensively regulates debt collectors, Tourgeman v. Collins Financial 21 Servs., Inc., 755 F.3d 1109, 1119 (9th Cir. 2014), imposing affirmative obligations on collectors 22 and broadly prohibiting abusive practices, Gonzales, 660 F.3d at 1061. The FDCPA is a strict 23 liability statute and does not ordinarily require proof of intentional violation. McCullough v.
24 Johnson, Rodenburg & Lauinger, LLC, 637 F.3d 939, 948 (9th Cir. 2011). Because the FDCPA
25 “is a remedial statute, it should be construed liberally in favor of the consumer.” Clark v. Capital 26 Credit & Collection Servs. Inc., 460 F.3d 1162, 1176 (9th Cir. 2006).

27 Most relevant here, the Act prohibits the use of “any false, deceptive, or 28 misleading representation or means” in connection with the collection of a debt, 15 U.S.C.

1 § 1692e, and any “unfair or unconscionable means” to collect or attempt to collect a debt, id.
2 § 1692f. Each of these provisions provides a non-exhaustive list of potential violations.
3 Misleading representations under section 1692e include: “[t]he false representation of the 4 character, amount, or legal status of any debt,” id. § 1692e(2)(A); “[t]he representation or 5 implication that nonpayment of any debt will result in . . . the seizure, garnishment, attachment, or 6 sale of any property or wages” of a debtor, id. § 1692e(4); “[t]he threat to take any action that 7 cannot legally be taken or that is not intended to be taken,” id. § 1692e(5); and “[t]he use of any 8 false representation or deceptive means to collect or attempt to collect any debt or to obtain 9 information concerning a consumer,” id. § 1692e(10). “Unconscionable,” as used in 10 section 1692f, extends to “[t]he collection of any amount (including any interest, fee, charge, or 11 expense incidental to the principal obligation) unless such amount is expressly authorized by the 12 agreement creating the debt or permitted by law,” id. § 1692f(1).

13 Allegations under sections 1692e and 1692f are both analyzed from the 14 perspective of the “least sophisticated debtor.” Wade v. Regl. Credit Ass’n, 87 F.3d 1098, 1100
15 (9th Cir. 1996); Swanson v. S. Oregon Credit Serv., Inc., 869 F.2d 1222, 1225 (9th Cir. 1988); 16 Baker v. G.C. Services Corp., 677 F.2d 775, 778 (9th Cir. 1982). A claim under section 1692e, 17 for example, “takes into account whether the least sophisticated debtor would likely be misled by 18 a communication.” Davis v. Hollins L., 832 F.3d 962, 964 (9th Cir. 2016) (citing Tourgeman, 19 755 F.3d at 1119). This standard is lower than a reasonableness standard, Tourgeman, 755 F.3d 20 at 1119, and the “least sophisticated debtor may be uninformed, naive, and gullible,” Evon v. Law
21 Offices of Sidney Mickell, 688 F.3d 1015, 1027 (9th Cir. 2012). Nonetheless, the debtor’s 22 “interpretation of a collection notice cannot be bizarre or unreasonable,” and an interpreting court 23 must presume debtors have “a basic level of understanding and willingness to read [the relevant 24 documents] with care” in order to safeguard bill collectors from liability for consumers’ “bizarre 25 or idiosyncratic interpretations of collection notices.” Id. (quoting Clomon v. Jackson, 988 F.2d 26 1314, 1319 (2d Cir. 1993) and Campuzano–Burgos v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 550 F.3d 294, 27 298 (3rd Cir. 2008)).

28

1 A. Collection of Time-barred Debts under FDCPA (First Claim)

2 White alleges First Step violated various provisions of sections 1692e and 1692f 3 by using the term “settlement” in its collection letter, offering several payment options and 4 neglecting to disclose that any payment would revive the statute of limitations. FAC ¶¶ 51–56
5 (claim 1). First Step contends the collection letter does not violate the FDCPA as a matter of law.
6 Mot. 5–8.

7 The Ninth Circuit has not squarely addressed the question presented here: whether 8 the use of “settlement” in a collection letter, along with the failure to disclose the time-barred 9 nature of a debt and the potential for revival of the debt, may violate the FDCPA. As a result, the 10 court first turns to the interpretations of the two federal agencies responsible for enforcing the 11 FDCPA and then to the Circuit courts that have relied on the agencies’ interpretation to address 12 this issue.

13 1. Federal Agencies’ Interpretations

14 White points to interpretations from the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) and the 15 Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB) and argues these interpretations must be given 16 Chevron deference or, at the least, Skidmore deference. Opp’n 18 (citing Chevron USA Inc. v.
17 Natural Resources Defense Council, 467 U.S. 837, 843 (1984); Skidmore v. Swift & Co., 323 U.S.
18 134, 140 (1944)).

19 Under Chevron, where Congress has not clearly spoken, a reviewing court must 20 defer to an agency’s construction of a statute so long as it reasonable. Chevron, 467 U.S. at 843.
21 However, such deference applies only “when it appears that Congress delegated authority to the 22 agency generally to make rules carrying the force of law, and that the agency interpretation 23 claiming deference was promulgated in the exercise of that authority.” Garcia-Quintero v.
24 Gonzales, 455 F.3d 1006, 1012 (9th Cir. 2006) (quoting United States v. Mead Corp., 533 U.S.
25 218, 226–27 (2001)). Under FDCPA, Congress provided rulemaking authority to the CFPB but 26 not the FTC. See 15 U.S.C. § 1692l(d) (“[T]he [CFPB] may prescribe rules with respect to the 27 collection of debts by debt collectors . . .”). But the CFPB material discussed below references 28 only proposed rules that have not been promulgated. Because the material on which White relies

1 from both the FTC and the CFPB was not promulgated in the exercise of either agency's 2 rulemaking authority, Chevron does not apply. Cf. Hall v. U.S. E.P.A., 273 F.3d 1146, 1156 (9th 3 Cir. 2001) ("Interpretations of the Act set forth in such non-precedential documents are not 4 entitled to Chevron deference.").

5 Even where Chevron does not apply, the persuasiveness of an agency's 6 pronouncements may nevertheless entitle it to respect. Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Garvey, 383 F.3d
7 891, 903 (9th Cir. 2004) (citing Christensen v. Harris County, 529 U.S. 576, 587 (2000))
8 ("[I]nterpretations contained in formats such as opinion letters are 'entitled to respect' under our 9 decision in Skidmore [], but only to the extent that those interpretations have the 'power to 10 persuade.'" (internal citations omitted)); cf. Fed. Trade Comm'n v. AT & T Mobility LLC, 835 11 F.3d 993, 1003 (9th Cir. 2016) (although FTC may be entitled to Skidmore deference in its 12 enforcement of the FTC Act, finding FTC's interpretation unpersuasive). Because the court finds 13 the FTC's and CFPB's interpretations persuasive, it applies Skidmore.

14 Congress has charged both the FTC and the CFPB with various responsibilities 15 under FDCPA. See, e.g., 15 U.S.C. § 1692l(c) (FTC has authority to issue advisory opinions, 16 commentary and letter opinions over interpretation of FDCPA); 15 U.S.C. § 1692b(6) (CFPB has 17 authority to "prescribe rules with respect to the collection of debts by debt collectors"); id. § 18 1691f (CFPB must provide annual reports to Congress regarding federal government's efforts to 19 implement FDCPA). The Ninth Circuit has explained that the FTC in particular, in light of its 20 "accumulated expertise" regarding the "expectations and beliefs of the public, especially where 21 the alleged deception results from an omission of information instead of a statement," is 22 "generally in a better position than the courts to determine when a practice is deceptive." Simeon 23 Mgt. Corp. v. Fed. Trade Comm'n, 579 F.2d 1137, 1145 (9th Cir. 1978).

24 Given the responsibilities and expertise of the FTC and the CFPB, the court briefly 25 summarizes their interpretations, recommendations and proposals regarding the collection of 26 time-barred debts. The FTC has noted "in many circumstances [] a collection attempt [of a time-27 barred debt] may create a misleading impression that the collector can sue the consumer in court 28 to collect the debt," in violation of the FDCPA. FTC Report 2010. To avoid such confusion, the

1 FTC recommends collectors “disclose clearly and prominently to consumers before seeking 2 payment on such time-barred debt that because of the passage of time, they can no longer sue in 3 court to collect the debt or otherwise compel payment.” Id. at 25–26. The CFPB largely takes 4 the same position as the FTC, and is considering³ a proposal to require time-barred debt 5 disclosures that include brief, plain-language statements informing the consumer that, because of 6 the age of the debt, the debt collector cannot sue to recover it. CONSUMER FINANCIAL 7 PROTECTION BUREAU, SMALL BUSINESS REVIEW PANEL FOR DEBT COLLECTOR
8 AND DEBT BUYER RULEMAKING 20 (2016) (CFPB Proposals 2016).

9 As to the collection of time-barred debts in states where partial payment can revive 10 the debt, the FTC explains these efforts “may create a misleading impression as to the 11 consequences of making such a payment,” again in violation of the FDCPA. FTC Report 2010 at 12 28. In order to prevent such a misimpression, collectors need to “disclose clearly and 13 prominently to consumers prior to requesting or accepting such payments that (1) the collector 14 cannot sue to collect the debt and (2) providing a partial payment would revive the collector’s 15 ability to sue to collect the balance.” Id.; see also FED. TRADE COMM’N, THE STRUCTURE 16 AND PRACTICE OF THE DEBT BUYING INDUSTRY 47 (2013) (FTC Report 2013). The 17 CFPB similarly acknowledges that many consumers do not know, and may even find 18 counterintuitive, the effects of making a partial payment on a time-barred debt. CFPB Proposals 19 2016 at 20. As a result, the CFPB is considering a proposal to altogether prohibit collection on a 20 time-barred suit unless the collector waives its right to subsequently sue on the debt. Id. at 22.

21 In sum, the FTC and the CFPB both have recognized many consumers may not 22 understand the nature of a time-barred debt with respect to the creditor’s inability to sue or the 23 debtor’s ability to revive the debt and make themselves subject to suit anew. The FTC 24 specifically finds collection letters for time-barred debts subject to revival may mislead many

25
26 ³ The CFPB continues to consider the proposed rules discuss here. See Consumer 27 Financial Protection Bureau, Spring 2017 Rulemaking Agenda, 28 <https://www.consumerfinance.gov/about-us/blog/spring-2017-rulemaking-agenda/> (last visited September 15, 2017).

1 consumers in violation of the FDCPA, and the CFPB is in the process of considering proposals to 2 require further disclosure regarding the collection attempts. The court finds these interpretations 3 persuasive; they support the conclusion that attempts to collect such as First Step's here may be 4 actionable under FDCPA.

5 In arguing for a more flexible interpretation of the agencies' conclusions, First 6 Step points to two consent decrees, entered in cases in which the FTC or CFPB were involved, 7 that suggest it is enough for a debt collector to disclose it "will not" sue on the debt. Reply 2-3 8 (citing consent decrees filed in United States v. Asset Acceptance, LLC, Case No. 8:12-cv-00182
9 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 31, 2012), and Portfolio Recovery Associates, LLC, CFPB No. 2015-CFPB-0023
10 (Sept. 9, 2015)). However, a consent decree, which is fundamentally a settlement agreement 11 between the parties, necessarily reflects a compromised position. As a result, both consent 12 decrees are entitled to limited weight. The Asset Acceptance decree, while approved by a federal 13 court, does not reflect the court's measured evaluation. See Case No. 8:12-cv-00182, Dkt. 3 (in 14 form order, and without discussion, granting request to enter consent decree one day after case 15 was filed). In any event, the "will not" language conflicts with the express interpretations of the 16 FTC and the CFPB as reflected in their agency reports and rule proposals, respectively. See FTC 17 Report 2010 at 25-26; FTC Report 2013 at 47; CFPB Proposals 2016 at 20.

18 There is a critical distinction between a collector asserting it "will not" sue from 19 one asserting it "cannot" sue. See FTC Report 2013 at 47 n.194 (citing 2010 study finding 20 consumers who were told debt "cannot be enforced against you through court action" were 21 significantly more likely to decline to pay). "Will not" implies both that the collector has the 22 power to sue and that nothing precludes it from changing its mind later, whereas "cannot sue" 23 implies neither. This distinction may make all the difference at summary judgment. Smith v.
24 Convergent Outsourcing, Inc., 15-12756, 2016 WL 6524148, at *3 (E.D. Mich. Nov. 1, 2016) 25 (finding debt collector did not violate the FDCPA when issuing a letter noting "we cannot sue to 26 collect this debt"). Against the weight of agency interpretations, and at this stage, First Step has 27 not provided sufficient authority to permit it to disclose anything less than it cannot sue.
28

1 The court next turns to Circuit interpretations of these issues, to the extent Circuits 2 have addressed them. As explained below, most of the relevant authority, and the more recent 3 trend among that authority, adopts the agencies' interpretations explained above.

4 2. Other Circuits' Interpretations

5 Federal courts are divided on whether efforts to collect an unenforceable debt, if 6 unaccompanied by a threat of litigation, violate the FDCPA. See Finley v. Dynamic Recovery
7 Sols. LLC, 14-CV-04028-TEH, 2015 WL 3750140, at *4 (N.D. Cal. June 15, 2015) (citing 8 Alborzian v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, N.Am., 235 Cal. App. 4th 29, 36–37 (Cal. Ct. App. 2015)
9 (collecting cases)). In the Third and Eighth Circuits, a collection letter is actionable under the 10 FDCPA only if it is accompanied by an overt threat of litigation. Huertas v. Galaxy Asset Mgmt., 11 641 F.3d 28 (3d Cir. 2011) (the FDCPA claim “hinges on whether [the debt collector’s] letter 12 threatened litigation”); Freyermuth v. Credit Bureau Servs., Inc., 248 F.3d 767, 771 (8th Cir.
13 2001) (case law on this issue “turn[s] on the threat, or actual filing, of litigation”). The three 14 Circuit courts to consider the question since Huertas have reached differing conclusions.

15 The Sixth Circuit has found an actionable FDCPA claim based on a collection 16 letter that provided a “settlement offer” as to a time-barred debt. Buchanan v. Northland Group, 17 Inc., 776 F.3d 393 (6th Cir. 2015). The court agreed with the Third and Eighth Circuits that by 18 itself an “attempt to collect a time-barred debt is not a thinly veiled threat to sue.” Id. at 399.
19 However, because the letter before the court offered to “settle” and invited partial payments, the 20 Sixth Circuit found it to be very different from the ones considered by the other Circuits, neither 21 of which addressed “the possibility that consumers might still be confused about the 22 enforceability of a debt or the pitfalls of partial payment.” Id. 399–400. As the court explained, 23 the settlement offer may “falsely impl[y] that the underlying debt is enforceable in court,” and the 24 invitation for partial payment may lead an unsophisticated consumer to “assume from the letter 25 that some payment is better than no payment,” which is not true in a state where partial payment 26 may revive the entirety of a time-barred debt. Id. at 399.

27 The Seventh and Fifth Circuits have departed even more starkly from the Third 28 and Eighth Circuits. McMahon v. LVNV Funding, LLC, 744 F.3d 1010 (7th Cir. 2014);

1 Daugherty v. Convergent Outsourcing, Inc., 836 F.3d 507 (5th Cir. 2016). As the Seventh Circuit
2 explained, the FDCPA clearly extends beyond improper threats to sue:

3 The proposition that a debt collector violates the FDCPA when it 4 misleads an unsophisticated consumer to believe a time-barred debt 5 is legally enforceable, regardless of whether litigation is threatened, 6 is straightforward under the statute. Section 1692e(2)(A) 7 specifically prohibits the false representation of the character or 8 legal status of any debt. Whether a debt is legally enforceable is a 9 central fact about the character and legal status of that debt. A 10 misrepresentation about that fact thus violates the FDCPA. Matters 11 may be even worse if the debt collector adds a threat of litigation, 12 see 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(5), but such a threat is not a necessary 13 element of a claim.

14 Id. at 1020. Noting that its decision departed from the other Circuits, the Seventh Circuit 15 explained “the statute cannot bear the reading that those courts have given it.” Id. The court 16 continued:

17 The plain language of the FDCPA prohibits not only threatening to 18 take actions that the collector cannot take, but also the use of any 19 false, deceptive, or misleading representation, including those about 20 the character or legal status of any debt. If a debt collector stated 21 that it could sue on a time[-]barred debt but was promising to 22 forbear, that statement would be a false representation about the 23 legal status of that debt.

24 Id. at 1021 (emphasis in original) (alteration added). The Fifth Circuit recently adopted in full the 25 Seventh Circuit’s interpretation of the FDCPA. Daugherty, 836 F.3d at 513.

26 In sum, three recent Circuit decisions have found a collection letter that offers to 27 “settle” and fails to address the effects of a partial payment may violate the FDCPA. Daugherty, 28 836 F.3d 507; Buchanan, 776 F.3d 393; McMahon, 744 F.3d 1010. The two earlier decisions from the Third and Eighth Circuits do not address either of these features of a collection letter.
Huertas, 641 F.3d 28; Freyermuth, 248 F.3d 767. Thus, the balance of Circuit authority, and all of the Circuit authority directly on point, finds an actionable claim under the FDCPA

The court next turns to First Step’s debt collection letters.

3. First Step’s Collection of Time-Barred Debts

As noted, White seeks to represent a nationwide class of debtors who have received similar letters to the one she received from First Step. FAC ¶¶ 23, 35, 37. The letter she received said First Step had been “authorized to settle” the alleged debt and provided multiple

1 options for White’s partial payment. Id. Ex. A (Collection Letter). The letter failed to disclose
2 that the debt was time-barred by the four-year statute of limitations applicable in California. Id. ¶ 3 15. The letter only generally explained “the law limits how long you can be sued on a debt” and 4 that “because of the age of the debt, Cach, LLC, will not sue you for it.” Id. Ex. A (Collection 5 Letter). At this stage, it is plausible that the least sophisticated debtor could believe the debt is 6 enforceable, a misrepresentation about the legal status of the debt that would violate section 7 1692e(2)(A). See McMahon, 744 F.3d at 1021; Daugherty, 836 F.3d 513; FTC Report 2010 at 8 25.

9 The letter also failed to disclose the fact that the debt could be revived under 10 California law by a partial payment, making White subject to suit by Cach, LLC, if she took 11 advantage of any one of the payment options offered in the letter. FAC ¶ 15. This omission 12 could mislead the least sophisticated consumer to “assume from the letter that some payment is 13 better than no payment,” which is simply not the case in a state where partial payment may revive 14 the entirety of a time-barred debt. Buchanan, 776 F.3d at 399; FTC Report 2010 at 28. The 15 letter’s critical silence on this point could therefore constitute a “false, deceptive, or misleading 16 representation” about the character of the debt, in violation of section 1692e. Particularly where 17 White alleges First Step engaged in a “systematic scheme to mislead consumers into making 18 payments on time-barred debts, so that the statute of limitations on these otherwise uncollectable 19 debts is renewed,” FAC ¶ 23, the omission also could constitute a “false, deceptive, or misleading 20 . . . means” of collection, in violation of section 1692e, or an “unfair or unconscionable means” to 21 collect the debt, in violation of section 1692f.

22 The court also does not reject the notion that the letter may be interpreted by the 23 least sophisticated debtor as an implicit threat to sue. The letter makes repeated offers to “settle” 24 and suggests the recipient “may wish to consult with an attorney.” Id. Ex. A (Collection Letter).
25 As the Sixth Circuit has explained, “formal and informal dictionaries alike contain a definition of 26 ‘settle’ that refers to concluding a lawsuit.” Buchanan, 776 F.3d at 399 (citing, inter alia, 27 Webster’s Third New International Dictionary 2079 (2002); Black’s Law Dictionary 1372 (6th 28 ed. 1990)). Although the letter’s language may at a minimum misrepresent that the debt may still

1 be enforceable in court, id., it may further be interpreted by the least sophisticated consumer as an 2 implicit threat to exercise an enforcement right. See Perretta v. Capital Acquisitions & Mgmt.
3 Co., No. C-02-05561 RMW, 2003 WL 21383757, at *3 (N.D. Cal. May 5, 2003) (finding letter, 4 followed up with conversation asserting “further steps would be taken,” could be threatening to 5 least sophisticated consumer); cf. Wade v. Regional Credit Ass’n, 87 F.3d 1098, 1100 (9th Cir.
6 1996) (finding collection letter explaining that failure to pay could adversely affect her credit
7 reputation did not constitute threat to sue). The letter here does explain that Cach, LLC, the debt 8 holder, “will not sue you” for the debt, id., but this scant assurance may seem more like an empty 9 promise to a debtor receiving a collection agency’s “request” to pay nearly four times the amount 10 of the original loan. Moreover, First Step, as a collection agency, and not Cach, LLC the debt 11 holder, sent the letter. If the least sophisticated debtor were to read the agency’s words as an 12 implicit threat to sue, those words would constitute a “threat to take any action that cannot legally 13 be taken or that is not intended to be taken,” in violation of section 1692e(5). Wade, 87 F.3d at 14 1100.

15 First Step’s invocation of language approved by the court in Buchanan is 16 unavailing. See Mem. P. & A. 7; Reply 2–3. It is true that the Sixth Circuit favorably cited the 17 collection agency’s new language which, similar to First Step’s letter here, explained “[t]he law 18 limits how long you can be sued on a debt. Because of the age of your debt, LVNV Funding 19 LLC, will not sue you for it” Buchanan, 776 F.3d at 400. But the Sixth Circuit pointed to 20 this language only to demonstrate that a collector could provide greater disclosure to debtors 21 without giving legal advice. Id. (explaining it “is not a herculean task” to provide statute of 22 limitations information without giving legal advice). The language in the updated letter was not 23 the subject of the Sixth Circuit’s opinion finding an actionable claim under the FDCPA. Id.

24 In sum, White has sufficiently pled multiple theories supporting a viable claim 25 under the FDCPA. The court therefore DENIES First Step’s motion as to White’s first claim.

26 B. Over-Collection of Debts Under FDCPA (Second Claim)

27 White also alleges First Step violated various provisions of sections 1692e and 28 1692f by attempting to collect an amount in “gross excess of anything permitted by law or

1 agreement.” FAC ¶¶ 57–61 (claim 2). First Step moves to dismiss White’s second claim on the 2 grounds that First Step had no knowledge the debt amount was incorrect and was entitled to rely 3 on the debt amounts reported to it by Cach, LLC, as the owner of the debt. Mot. 8–9.

4 White presents at least two viable theories supporting a claimed FDCPA violation 5 based on First Step’s alleged attempt to over-collect on her state debt. For both theories, she 6 asserts she never agreed to pay interest or fees that could increase her loan amount from $5,000 to 7 $17,799.31. FAC ¶¶ 25, 31. Under the first theory, even if Cach, LLC, actually reported to First 8 Step that White owed $17,799.31, First Step attempted to collect an amount that was not 9 authorized by the original loan agreement. This would constitute a violation of section 1692f(1), 10 which prohibits the collection of any amount not expressly authorized by the agreement.
11 15 U.S.C. § 1692f(1); see also 15 U.S.C. § 1692f (prohibiting any “unfair or unconscionable 12 means” in the collection of a debt). Under the second theory, assuming Cach, LLC did not report 13 to First Step that White owed as much as $17,799.31, First Step misrepresented the amount of the 14 debt White owed. This would constitute a violation of section 1692e(2)(A), which prohibits 15 “[t]he false representation of the character, amount, or legal status of any debt.” 15 U.S.C.
16 § 1692e(2)(A). Because sections 1692e and 1692f are strict liability provisions, McCollough, 17 637 F.3d at 948, First Step is liable for the alleged violations if they are proved up, regardless of 18 whether the violations were knowing or intentional. Clark, 460 F.3d at 1175; Donohue v. Quick 19 Collect, Inc., 592 F.3d 1027, 1030 (9th Cir. 2010). In any event, White specifically alleges First 20 Step’s violations were effected knowingly and intentionally. FAC ¶ 58. White adequately 21 alleges First Step violated FDCPA when it attempted to collect an amount far surpassing the 22 original debt.

23 First Step’s argument that it was entitled to reasonably rely on the debt amount as 24 reported to it by Cach, LLC, see Mot. 8–9; Reply 5–7, is unavailing in the face of the FDCPA as 25 a strict liability statute that does not require the collector’s knowing or intentional violation. The 26 argument also presents a factual question regarding First Step’s reasonable reliance that is not 27 susceptible to disposition at this stage.

28

1 To the extent First Step’s reasonable reliance argument asserts an affirmative
2 defense, such an assertion does not support dismissal here. Under the FDCPA’s bona fide error 3 defense, a debt collector may not be held liable “if the debt collector shows by a preponderance of 4 evidence that the violation was not intentional and resulted from a bona fide error 5 notwithstanding the maintenance of procedures reasonably adapted to avoid any such error.”
6 15 U.S.C. § 1692k(c). In order to establish this defense, a collector must show its reliance on a 7 creditor’s representation is reasonable, Clark, 460 F.3d at 1174, and produce evidence of 8 “reasonable preventive procedures” aimed at avoiding errors, Reichert v. National Credit
9 Systems, Inc., 531 F.3d 1002, 1006 (9th Cir. 2008). Notwithstanding these verification 10 procedures, the FDCPA does not impose upon a collector a duty to independently investigate a 11 debt owner’s reported claims. Clark, 460 F.3d at 1174; see also Palmer v. I.C. Sys., Inc., C-04-12 03237 RMW, 2005 WL 3001877, at *8 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 8, 2005); Ducrest v. Alco Collections, 13 Inc., 931 F. Supp. 459, 462 (M.D. La. 1996). But it is the collector’s burden to prove this 14 affirmative defense, Reichert, 531 F.3d at 1006, and a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) may 15 be granted on the grounds of an affirmative defense only if the “defense raises no disputed issues 16 of fact.” Scott v. Kuhlmann, 746 F.2d 1377, 1378 (9th Cir. 1984). First Step’s indirect invocation 17 of the bona fide error defense raises several issues of fact, including whether First Step 18 reasonably relied on representations by the owner of the debt and whether First Step had adequate 19 procedures to verify the amount of the debt. In light of these fact-specific inquiries, dismissal of 20 White’s second claim is not warranted at this stage.

21 IV. DERIVATIVE RFDCPA CLAIM (THIRD CLAIM)

22 White also asserts a third claim under California’s RFDCPA, as derivative of the 23 federal claims under FDCPA. FAC ¶ 64 (“Each of the above named violations of the FDCPA is 24 also a violation of the RFDCPA.”). First Step moves for dismissal of this claim on the basis that 25 the underlying FDCPA claims must also fail. Mot. 9.

26 RFDCPA explicitly incorporates FDCPA by reference. See Cal. Civ. Code 27 § 1788.17; Alborzian, 235 Cal. App. 4th at 36; Finley, 2015 WL 3750140, at *5. Because White 28 has adequately alleged claims under the FDCPA, she also has adequately alleged violations of her

1 derivative claim under the RFDCPA. The court need not separately address this claim. See, e.g., 2 Davis v. Hollins L., 832 F.3d 962, 966 n.3 (9th Cir. 2016) (“Because the [RFDCPA] claim is 3 derivative of the [FDCPA] claim, we do not address it separately.”).

4 V. CONCLUSION

5 The court DENIES First Step’s motion to dismiss. An answer shall be due within 6 fourteen (14) days of this order.
